WINNIPEG TOUR PARTY ROYALLY WELCOMED

CANADIANS FETED BY THE CITIZENS OF BRAINERD

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER TENDERED BY THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

PROGRAM OF ADDRESSES WITH MUSIC BY BRAINERD LADIES BAND

When the Winnipeg Friendship tour made its night control at Brainerd Sunday evening, the Canadians found themselves among friends. They were feted by the citizens and shown all possible honors.

A party of representative citizens met the tour party at the Pequot cross roads, and with Captain and Mrs. W. H. Fawcett leading the cars, a hurried survey was made of Breezy Point Lodge, the golf links, the fox farm, the wonderful log hotel which possesses a dining room seating a thousand people. The cars followed in close formation as they sped over the roadways of the resort and then swung on to the Merrifield road. Fast time was made from this point onward.

Arriving at Brainerd a dense mass of people had congregated at the Y. M. C. A. building. The Brainerd Ladies Band played a welcoming air and the tourists went to their respective hotels. The complimentary dinner, tendered by the Chamber of Commerce followed.

As rain had splashed at intervals, the open air exercises contemplated at the Y. M. C. A. were abandoned and all repaired to the Chamber of Commerce parlors. After a number of selections by the band, the chairman of the evening, John A. Hoffbauer, announced the opening international air, "America" on this side of the line, and "God Save the King" in Canada.

Mayor George A. Cain, in a few well chosen words, extended greetings of the city and welcomed Mayor Ralph Webb and party of Winnipeg and their friends accompanying them on the tour.

R. R. Gould, president of the Brainerd Chamber of Commerce, extended the welcome of the civic association, dwelt on the beauties of the lake region and hoped the tourists would come often.

Mayor Webb of Winnipeg responded to the greetings and gave a most comprehensive address. His sincerity, his eloquent language, forceful and direct, held his listeners from start to finish. He showed the various ways in which Winnipeg and Brainerd may co-operate to mutual advantage and how friendship between the two cities is something worth fostering. He quoted many facts regarding the tourist travel and spoke of previous tours, the Pines to Palms, etc. He mentioned numerous conventions at Winnipeg and hoped Brainerd citizens would attend.

City Attorney D. H. Fullerton voiced a greeting from the Lions and said the club would attend the Winnipeg Lions convention with about 100 per cent attendance.

Walter M. Murphy, county highway engineer, took as his topic, "I Know My Canada." Murphy has had a rare experience in Canada, having at one time been a member of the noted Northwest Mounted Police, late, enlisting and fighting in the Boer war with distinction and gaining numerous medals.

Brainerd People Know Canada
As the program of the evening proceeded, the Canadians soon became aware that the Brainerd speakers knew something of Canada. They claimed either birth in Canada or else had lived there at one time or had visited the country.

Captain William H. Fawcett of Breezy Point Lodge, born in Canada, spoke of his newspaper experiences on the Winnipeg papers. He referred to the growth of the tourist trade and the number of Winnipeg people who visited his resort. Mayor Webb had previously referred to the fact that Winnipeg people knew the Captain before Brainerd did.

Basil T. Heath, past commander of the American Legion, extended a greeting in behalf of his organization and referred to the pleasant time the Legionnaires had in Winnipeg last year. Nowhere else in the world did one find two nations, like Canada and the United States, with a boundary line clear of all implements of war. The Canadians and Americans, at all times, have been true neighbors, said the speaker.

A. C. Mraz was in splendid voice and sang two baritone solos. Mrs. Winifred Cronk Ziebell, director of

SWEDISH ROYALTY TO VISIT IN THE TWIN CITIES

Stockholm, May 17.—(UP)—Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and the Crown Princess of Sweden left today aboard the liner Cripsholm for the United States. They will tour, visiting New York, Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul, Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake and will sail for the Orient, August 12.

PILSUDSKI GOVERNMENT REIGNS STEADILY

NEW REGIME IS ACCORDED CONSIDERABLE RECOGNITION

REPRESENTATIVES OF VARIOUS FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS VISIT MARSHAL

Warsaw, May 17.—(UP)—Recognition of the government of Marshal Josef Pilsudski in Poland, set up as a result of his apparently successful revolt which forced resignation of the previous government, was virtually accomplished today. It was done through representatives of numerous foreign governments visiting the heads of Pilsudski's regime. The American, French and Soviet legations were among the first to take up connections with Pilsudski's government.

During the heat of the fighting which marked the revolt all legations raised their national flags to assure immunity from attack. Through an alleged misunderstanding Pilsudski's troops entered the French legation. It was understood, however, they withdrew immediately and Pilsudski expressed his regret.

The Soviet legation refrained from hoisting a red flag but barricaded its premises. It was not molested.

The Brainerd Ladies Band, played a cornet solo.

A. G. Anderson, chairman of the board of county commissioners, was to have spoken, but was called away, and so the chairman took of the splendid co-operation between county board and the Chamber of Commerce, and how both had produced a splendid map of the Brainerd Lake Region revealing some 700 lakes in this vicinity, the highways, resorts, towns, etc., which maps will be given the widest kind of distribution. Had they been on hand, the Winnipeg party would have taken quite a number.

Tourists Enraptured With Band
The Winnipeg tourists, ladies and gentlemen, were enraptured with the Brainerd Ladies Band. Mayor Webb suggested their playing in Winnipeg. And so did W. McCurdy of the Winnipeg Tribune, when called upon to speak. He said if that band didn't go to Winnipeg, there was liable to be a lot of Winnipeg boys making tracks for Brainerd and staying here permanently.

Carl Meyer, president of the Winnipeg Lions club, went further than the two mentioned, and plans having the band play at the Stampede, Wild West cowboy show and rodeo July 3. If the Lions club backs the president, the band will be engaged as the Lions' contribution to the Winnipeg spectacle.

The girls played at the Y. M. C. A. lawn, in the Ransford hotel lobby and at the Chamber of Commerce and gave general satisfaction. When Mr. Melver asked how many girls wished to go to Winnipeg, every hand was raised. And so today they are figuring it out. Their answer will be transmitted to Mr. Melver and he will take up the proposition with his club.

Mr. Haultain, one of the leading business men of Winnipeg and member of the Retail Merchants Association, spoke briefly.

And then as the climax came a bit of word painting of the beauties of Minnesota's lakes which captivated all hearers. W. H. Evans of the Breezy Point Development Company who has had experience in large realty deals in Florida and California, caught the attention of the audience as he dilated on the fact that the stream of tourists was setting towards the Brainerd Lake Region, that cottage sites were desired, and that a residence at the lakes yielded large returns in amusement, recreation and health. He told how

STEPS TO SEE IF RUSSELL SCOTT IS SANE

FORMER CANADIAN MILLIONAIRE CONVICTED OF KILLING CHICAGO DRUG CLERK

3 STATE ALIENISTS TO EXAMINE MENTAL STATUS OF THE MAN

Springfield, Ill., May 17.—(UP)—First steps towards determining whether Russell Scott, former Canadian millionaire, who has been convicted of killing Joseph Maurer in a Chicago holdup, is sane and should be hanged, will be taken here today. Three state alienists, Dr. Herman Adler, state criminologist; Ralph Hinton, superintendent of the state hospital at Elgin, and Dr. Frank A. Suddelfield, superintendent of the Chester, Ill., hospital, will confer with Chuaney Jenkins, state director of public welfare.

Following today's conference the alienists together with two assistant state's attorneys from Cook county, will go to the Chester hospital where Scott is now held for the sanity investigation.

The recent move against Russell Scott, who thrice escaped the gallows by last minute action, was instituted by Jenkins last week when he announced that the state should learn definitely whether the former financial wizard was still mentally deficient. Scott has been in the state hospital now for several months. The former millionaire was convicted of killing Maurer in a holdup in a Chicago loop drug store. At the trial Scott maintained his brother, Robert, did the shooting, but he was convicted and sentenced to hang.

Three times dates for the hanging but last minute reprieves were granted on each occasion, the final one coming when, through the efforts of his attorney, William Scott Stewart, he was granted a sanity hearing. At this hearing he was adjudged insane and sent to Chester hospital.

In Chicago Stewart, who is preparing to defend the brother, Robert Scott, in the Maurer shooting case, announced he was ready to defend Russell again. He said that while Russell was insane without a question, he was prepared to throw a number of legal difficulties before the state should Russell be adjudged sane and re-sentenced to hang.

Milwaukee, May 17.—(UP)—Suffering from the heat of Milwaukee's hottest day of the season, John Sims, 45, colored porter, waded into Lake Michigan yesterday and drowned. The mercury reached 81.

Although there were a number of motor accidents very few persons were injured.

ST. PAUL HAS FRIENDSHIP TOUR

St. Paul, May 17.—(UP)—One hundred St. Paul business men are participating in St. Paul's annual friendship tour passing through South and North Dakota today on a special train.

The party left Sunday and will travel about 2,000 miles in a week. It will stop at Bismarck, N. D.

but six or seven states of America were vacation states and that the most desirable section was in the Minnesota lake region. The Canadian tourists missed seeing all the lakes in the vicinity of Brainerd by several hundred, but when Evans got through he had painted the glories of the lake country so vividly that one could sense the cool splash of the water, the tug of the fighting bass and pike, the green, shimmering water as it touched the bronzed shoulders of the bathers.

Literature bearing on the Brainerd Lake Region was distributed by A. L. Hoffman, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and his work with other committee men and directors of the association, helped make the visit of the Winnipeg Friendship Tour an outstanding success.

The tour party left about 7:20 o'clock this morning for Duluth.

BOMB EXPLODES NEAR FRONT DOOR AMERICAN EMBASSY

Buenos Aires, May 17.—(UP)—Explosion of a bomb placed near the front door of the United States embassy here last night slightly damaged the structure. A part of the outside wall was wrecked and a passerby injured although not seriously.

The explosion occurred at 10:05 p. m. when only servants were at home. All the windows of the house next door were broken and the owner hurt by a flying particle of the bomb, which was made from a cannon ball.

The damage to the embassy was not serious.

Major Dussenbury, military attaché, and officials of the city and federal governments, arrived within a few minutes, but were unable to explain the attack. No warning had been received.

A policeman and a passerby were the only witnesses.

WARNS AGAINST "CLASS WARFARE, SOCIAL UNREST"

WILLIAM GREEN, PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR, AT ST. PAUL

MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF POPE LEO XIII'S ENCYCLICAL ON "CAPITAL AND LABOR"

St. Paul, May 17.—(UP)—A warning against "class warfare, class antagonism and social unrest," was brought to the northwest Sunday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address marking the Minnesota Federation of Labor's observance of the 35th anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's encyclical on "Capital and Labor."

Green said that "even now in an enlightened period of industrial development there are found some employers and some corporations who deny their workers the right to enjoy collective bargaining for organization for mutual helplessness."

"This sort of policy," he said, "creates class warfare, class antagonism and social unrest."

Green made an indirect reference to the British general strike. Economic organizations, he said, are the hope of the workers. At present the "thoughts and attentions of the world are centered upon problems of labor and the relationship between capital and labor."

Recent events have stimulated and intensified the interest in industrial questions and industrial relationships.

Pope Leo's letter, Green said, presents the case of organized labor with "unanswerable logic and confounds its enemies and opponents."

PLAN MAY GAIN TEUTONS LEAGUE ENTRY

APPROVED TODAY BY LEAGUE OF NATIONS COUNCIL COMMISSION

WOULD INCREASE BY THREE NON-PERMANENT MEMBERSHIP OF COUNCIL

By HENRY WOOD

Geneva, May 17.—A plan under which it is believed the controversy which prevented Germany from becoming a member of the League of Nations at the recent Geneva meeting, will be settled, was approved today by the League of Nations council commission handling the question.

The plan would increase by three the non-permanent membership on the League council, of which it was tacitly understood Poland, China and Latin America would be given one each.

The commission expected to adjourn until June for the final adoption of the plan and also to permit diplomatic exchanges intended to induce Spain and Brazil to withdraw their candidacies for permanent memberships.

Germany failed to become a League member when a controversy arose over council memberships.

NORGE AIRMEN RESTING SAFE AT NOME TODAY

BRING WITH THEM ANSWERS TO MYSTERIES OF NORTH POLE

NO GREAT POLAR CONTINENT EXISTS, THEY TRAVELED STRAIGHT ACROSS POLE

Nome, Alaska, May 17.—(UP)—Less than a week after their departure from Spitzbergen on the Norge, Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth, who with Umberto Nobile, headed the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile polar expedition, rested in Nome today, safe after one of the most remarkable phases of both aviation and exploration in history.

They brought here with them the answer to two more of the great mysteries of the Arctic.

They had established, they said, that no great polar continent exists, and they have proven it possible to travel from one side of the world to the other via the straight line across the pole by air.

Ellsworth, Amundsen, Oscar Omdahl, chief engineer of the expedition, and Captain Oscar Wisting, navigator, arrived here yesterday from Teller and told of their trip.

With their arrival Nome learned for the first time details of the dirigible's voyage from the time the Norge was sighted from Point Barrow on Wednesday. Days and nights of ceaseless anxiety could have been ended had the population of this northern outpost known that the great airship had been moored safely at Teller.

Omdahl explained why it had been necessary to land at Teller.

"There was such a heavy fog and snow that we were fortunate to sight Teller," he said. "It was impossible to reach Nome, as we fell short and had to make a forced landing. The Norge landed on the ice at Teller and the gas was immediately let out. She is now almost totally disabled."

"We have proved conclusively that there was no land north of Alaska," Omdahl concluded.

A northwest gale was blowing over Teller, a settlement of about 100 natives and a handful of whites when the Norge appeared about 4 p. m. Thursday, Alaskan time. The dirigible was becoming heavy from a leakage of gas.

Arctic winds forced the Norge to circle over the hamlet for 2 1/2 hours. As the gale abated momentarily, an anchor was dropped and the villagers heaved on the anchor lines.

To direct the mooring work, Sergeant Titore Arduino descended by parachute. As Nobile opened its arms yesterday to the members of the expedition, the explorers explained the delays which had puzzled those waiting to welcome them.

Four members of the expedition said it would have been impossible to continue the flight to this point.

They said the chief obstacle was the gas leakage. Flying ice from the propellers had cut the fabric about the bags as the ship passed over the Arctic wastes.

The Norge spent considerable time above the pole, flying low over the ice and then rising until at one time the ship was 9,000 feet above the earth's northernmost spot. Early in the morning after leaving King's Bay, the pole was reached. A fog hung over the desolate Arctic sea.

A trip with few outstanding incidents was made from the pole to Alaska. Lack of sleep, cramped quarters and cold food and the constant battle against the elements were alone in the memories of the voyagers.

Aided by a fair wind, the Norge passed over Point Barrow on Wednesday and followed the coast line south. Commander Nobile was reluctant to begin deflation of his ship at Teller because of his pride in its achievement. The Norge will be shipped to the United States for reconstruction. As the dismantling went on, an inspection showed that no damage had resulted from the landing.

"The flight from Spitzbergen to the pole and Alaska was covered in 71 hours," Nobile said. "The first leg was covered smoothly."

"On the second leg, from the pole to Point Barrow, we were hampered by the dangerous formation of icebergs causing slight damage to the Norge."

WORK RESUMED IN BRITAIN, STATUS NORMAL

SUBJECT TO LIMITATIONS IMPOSED BY CONDITIONS OF COAL STRIKE

OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT COMMUNIQUE ON STRIKE SITUATION

London, May 17.—(UP)—"Subject to limitations imposed by conditions of the coal strike, work was resumed this morning throughout Great Britain in almost normal conditions," said the official government communique on the strike situation today.

It recounted the agreements that had been made and signed under which railway, omnibus and tramcar transportation had been substantially restored, work at the docks was resumed today and an agreement between publishers and employers "enables London evening newspapers to return to their usual size and appearance today."

The late emergency editions of morning newspapers were published this morning, the statement said.

Discussing the agreements under which the workers returned and England resumed more nearly the normal course of life, the communique said:

"The significant feature of all these new agreements is that they contain no provision for reduction of wages."

"In the terms under which London newspapers have decided to resume normal publication," the statement said. "The unions concerned have agreed that there shall in the future be no interference with the contents of newspapers."

Between now and Thursday representatives of the miners will discuss with government representatives proposals for the settlement of the coal strike and on Thursday will meet again in London.

The situation in the coal district generally was regarded as "fairly hopeful."

Premier Baldwin, the statement said, will discuss before commons the coal strike situation between now and Friday.

Troops, which guarded the docks during the strike, marched away today with bands and bagpipes playing.

Chicago, May 17.—(UP)—The body of the man found in West Chicago railroad yards several days ago with two bullet wounds in the head, has been identified by William Dress as that of his father, Henry Dress, 71, retired brewmaster of Minneapolis.

Dress told police his father had left Minneapolis several weeks ago with $1,000 to visit friends at Madison, Wis. Authorities incline to the murder theory.

PLEASURE YACHT DESTROYED BY FIRE

Duluth, May 17.—(UP)—The Flirt of Superior, Wis., a pleasure yacht, was destroyed by fire Sunday night near French River, Minn., and Captain Chester A. Massey, the owner, and the crew of three were forced to lifeboats to escape, according to word received here.

corps, with command over the dirigible forces of Italy, a 500,000 lire bonus and a gold medal for bravery, will be proposed to the King of Italy by Premier Mussolini as rewards for Umberto Nobile, builder and flight commander of the Norge. Nobile now ranks as a colonel in the Italian army.

NO DECISION SEEMS TO BE IN SIGHT TODAY

HOUSE TO TAKE UP $375,000,000 HAUGEN BILL TO-MORROW

DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS MAY END LAST WEEK OF THIS MONTH

By WILLIAM J. McEVROY

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 17.—The farm relief battle entered its third week in congress today with no decision in sight.

The house will take up the $375,000,000 Haugen bill again tomorrow but today and Wednesday are to be taken up with routine business so that debate on amendments probably will not be concluded until the last week of this month.

In the senate the combat will prolong the session, which may extend well into June. Prospects for eventual passage in both senate and house are good, but a presidential veto is possible if administration forces are not satisfied.

The most important amendments to the Haugen bill to be voted on this week are those of Haugen himself, which seek to strengthen support of his plan to fix prices, through a revolving fund, which would be repaid from an equalization fee assessed against the products handled by a proposed advisory farm board.

One amendment would cut the total expenditure from $375,000,000 to $175,000,000 and another would put the assessment of the equalization fee into effect at once, instead of two years from now as originally proposed. Another proposed amendment would make the entire act effective July 1, 1927, instead of July 1, 1926, as provided in the original measure.

There will be further battles over just what farm products should be dealt with as "basic commodities" under the bill.

Administration forces hope to substitute less drastic machinery for farm surplus disposal, through a federal fund of about $100,000,000 to be extended as credit to co-operative associations which would handle the marketing, thus assuming the functions contemplated for Haugen's farm board.

Sunday was a gala day for fishermen at Mille Lacs lake. The weather was ideal and most of the anglers were rewarded with a bountiful catch. One group of 12 twin city men returned with six sacks of pike to their credit. Fishermen were also much in evidence at Gull River but, according to reports, were less successful.

WIDE RANGE OF PRICES SUBJECT OF INVESTIGATION IN WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., May 17.—(UP)—Hearings before the Wisconsin department of markets to determine the cause of wide variation in coal prices at different points in the state last winter will start here tomorrow.

Time of the hearings was announced today by Commissioner Edward Nordman who will preside. After tomorrow's session here the inquiry will be continued in Milwaukee Wednesday.

The investigation was started by Sen. Max Heck as special attorney and Don E. Montgomery, marketing specialist, who found that wide price variations could not be accounted for entirely by difference in freight rates.

Byram said the first step has been taken to end the receivership and when it is ended the Milwaukee will be ready to meet all competition with one of the finest services in the country.

Glitter of Crystal or Bright Gleam of Metal

Each season one hears that beaded frocks from a fashion point of view are nonexistent. And each season they appear in new and more interesting versions and take their places in the important modes of the moment. It goes without saying, however, that the crude and rather garish effects which characterized the beaded frock that had such a vogue a few seasons ago is absent. One now finds delicate and intricate designs worked out in subtle colorings accented here and there with a gleam of metal or the glitter of crystal.

A fashion note emphasized by those who viewed the important collections of new French models introduced within the past few weeks is the tendency to slightly mold the lines of the frock in a manner not unlike that of the princess frock. It is only a suggestion, however, and all the more effective for its unobtrusiveness.

Treating Shoe Soles

Black Satin Is Used for This Spring Suit

This smart suit for the cool spring days is of black satin, with a high collar and a jabot of ecru lace. The hat is of black felt, with a band of red and a crystal ornament at the side.

Chic of Simplicity Is Found in Chiffon Garb

Those who have spent the winter months at the smart Florida resorts with one accord give precedence to the simple little frock of chiffon for informal evening wear. This frock is of such utter simplicity of line that it would be almost naive were it not for the skill and cleverness with which an intricate manipulation of fabric produces an effect of youthful and charming grace.

For all their simplicity, however, it takes a person of distinction and a certain amount of sophistication to wear them. There is a trick in achieving simplicity that only those initiated in all the varying ways of fashion can accomplish with any degree of success. Once achieved, nothing gives the effect of greater chic, which perhaps is the reason that year after year the great designers and those who interpret their modes to the world at large practice as well as preach the gospel of simplicity.

An outstanding phase in connection with the simple chiffon evening frock is the use of delicate flowerlike colorings in contrast to the vivid shades of other seasons.

Printed Silk for Coat, Plain Fabric for Dress

So beautiful are the new silks and in many ways so different in design and colorings from the materials of other years, that it is not surprising to find them put to uses never thought of heretofore.

In the ensemble of other seasons when a plain and patterned silk were combined, the figured material appeared as a lining of the coat which matched the frock. This year one finds this order reversed. Printed silks now fashion the coat itself and a plain-surfaced fabric is chosen for the dress. The result is very effective and amazingly chic.

The most strikingly individual of the new silks reflect a feeling for elusive tones on the order of pastel shades, but even more subdued and

Colors in Demand for New Shoes and Hosiery

Fashion dictators are at variance when it comes to stockings. Shall the dark or light colors be proclaimed as fashionable is the question. In the meantime each woman seems to be settling the question for herself. In the shops they say there is a tremendous demand for shoes in black, mauve, taupe and cannon shades. Those in gunmetal with black heels are also great favorites. On the other hand, there is no end to the light colors. New tones are continually appearing, and the moonlight, woodland rose, nude, the antelope series and all the others, too numerous to mention, are very much in demand.

With the colors that are appearing in the new shoes and the desire of good dressers that the footwear match or harmonize with the costume, it is fortunate there is such a wide range of colors to select from.

Black and Brilliants

Black for evening is the latest word from Paris and black chiffon dance frocks are worn by the smartest women. One frock is covered with glittering brilliants so attached as to give the effect of a pattern. There is no other decoration.

Two-Piece Jumpers Are Seasonable Favorites

Each week brings further proof that the ingenuity and cleverness of designers in creating new versions of the popular two-piece jumper frock have not been exhausted. So generally becoming are these costumes and so youthful and smart that it will probably be some time before they pass out of the fashion picture.

Among the latest models to be brought out are those fashioned of shantung or rajah silks. They are on an equality in popularity with Chinese damask and come in such a wide range of colors that they are adapted both to street frocks and to the colorful models designed for sports and country wear.

Taffeta also has found its way into the realm of the jumper dress and is used for several of the most attractive models shown this season.

Tailored Mode Leads in Clothes for Spring

The tailored mode, not only in the usual acceptance of the phrase as applied to suits and street frocks, but to afternoon costumes as well, may with truth be said to dominate the fashions of spring.

Not for many seasons has the simple tailor of blue serge or black and white checked wool been so much in evidence. Cut on the plainest lines, put together with meticulous tailoring, and with certain individual touches to give it character, this is the costume which the best-dressed women wear during the morning hours of shopping and for luncheon.

Backs Bloused in Many New Frocks

Irregular Hemline Points Toward Longer Skirts; Cape and Capelet.

The forward-looking ladies of the mode will tread a difficult path this season. So many themes have been offered by the Paris couturiers, observes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, that even the casual dilettante in fashion can choose from an infinite variety of ideas, and the new chic will be a matter of painstaking individual selection.

Consider the silhouette question. The newest in all Paris is the "Page Boy," which Martial et Armand presents, built on the lines of the page boy's doublet primarily, but in materials less cumbersome to wear. Taffeta is the favored fabric sponsored for the "Page Boy"—the soft and supple taffeta which so gracefully adapts itself to the slender silhouette of youth.

If one regards the stationary line of sports clothes and ensembles for morning wear, the silhouette is almost perpendicular, but when that line begins to move there is another story to tell—the slight flare. The flaring movement is legion in its interpretation, but in coats its leading factor is the side plait. Some are flat, some are box, some are inverted. Occasionally there is a frankly circular skirt in the sports costume, such as that shown in "Cow Girl," in the Jane Regny collection, or again in the two-piece ensemble seen at Louischoullanger, which presents the skirt very full in front and very tight and plain in back. Plaited skirts have gone back to that tight effect which ripples so easily when in motion.

The cape, cape-dress, cape-coat and capelet divide their attention between silhouettes for morning and silhouettes for afternoon. The cape, of course, continues its journey into evening hours in a dozen variations mainly tight at the hips. But hipline snugness in wraps depends more on the wearer than on the coat, for this is another buttonless season, and largely unbelted except in the homespun sports and motoring coats which have quite wide belts.

In the afternoon the silhouette changes its personality and chooses to be fluffy and full. Ruffles are plaited and circular, or planked and gathered as Jenny and Cheruit do it. Backs are bloused in many of the frocks, giving an adroit means of loosening the silhouette of the waist above its hipline deep belt, sometimes arranged in three tiers of belts as Worth presents it. Skirts are very full and by virtue of their fullness appear shorter than ever, while sports and street clothes are consistently short, some just touching the bend of the knee. Afternoon clothes, especially for more formal occasions, are a trifle longer. The irregular hemline, seen so often, assists in the longer skirt for afternoon.

Goes Further Than That

Blouses More Feminine
Suits become more masculine in line but blouses make a right about face and become softer and more feminine. Plaited jabots and cascades of frills contribute much to the smartness of blouses designed for the new tailleurs.

Larger Hats of Navy Blue
A new note in spring fashions is the wearing of larger hats of navy blue straw with the new blue taffeta dresses and ensembles. Usually a touch of red is introduced somewhere about the costume.

WHEN NELSON BATTLED KINDRED

As forecast in the Brainerd Dispatch some weeks ago, the biography of Knute Nelson, as published in the Minneapolis Tribune, has reached the stage of the Nelson-Kindred battle for congressional honors. Martin W. Odland, in the issue of Sunday, May 16, entitles the chapter, "Nelson Battled Kindred to a Finish in the Bloody Fifth." As also forecast by the Brainerd Dispatch, Mr. Odland made use of material furnished by Elmer E. Adams in his interesting story of the Kindred-Nelson campaign as read before the Minnesota Historical society.

The territory which was the scene of this titanic political battle was then known as the fifth district. Brainerd gets a lot of mention in Mr. Odland's history because it was the seat of Kindred. We quote these sections:

"Mr. Kindred made known his congressional aspirations soon after the fifth congressional district was formed and it was not long before the other candidates realized that in him they had a dangerous opponent—not because he had an extensive acquaintance throughout the great district, not because he could point to a record of public service that gave him prestige or popularity, but because of the bold, reckless and unscrupulous methods he adopted in the prosecution of his campaign. His early political training had been received in Pennsylvania."

"Foremost of all the Kindred commanders was Colonel C. B. Sleeper, Brainerd. Judging by the northern Minnesota newspapers of 1882, he must have been a wonderful man. He was here, there and everywhere, almost at the same time. It was before the day of airplanes, but Colonel Sleeper—like A. C. Townley in 1920—must have flown from county to county on the wings of the wind. And wherever he appeared there was 'something doing'."

The late H. P. Hall, a keen political reporter, is quoted by Mr. Odland as saying: "At first," said he, "the county conventions called to send delegates to the district convention at Detroit were conducted with some degree of fairness, though in every case the contest would be a sharp one. After one or two conventions had split and sent double delegations a spirit of recklessness broke out, and whichever side rightfully had control of the county convention, the other proceeded to make an excuse for a split and send a contesting delegation."

"There was absolutely no attempt to be fair in this contest for the congressional nomination. This statement applies to both the Nelson and the Kindred forces, but a good deal more to the Kindred than to the Nelson men, because Nelson was really stronger and had a more substantial backing than Kindred. Kindred in reality had little backing but his money and it was the deliberate plan whenever Nelson had carried a county for the Kindred men to come in and hold another convention, appointing a double-delegation. Of course, this bore the usual fruit of a split in the convention, and if the Scandinavian element had not been so enormously strong in northern Minnesota, it would have resulted in Knute Nelson's defeat as well as Kindred's. As it was, Nelson proved invincible, and not only won in that campaign, but went on to win in the future, until he had achieved national renown."

"In some cases an extra convention was held without any pretense of authority, and it was very evident that Nelson and Kindred, or their friends, intended to make a double district convention. The result was that when the convention was due to meet, there were only 18 out of 29 counties which could lay any claim to being 'regular.'"

"The congressional committee, appointed by the Republican State Central committee, to supervise the campaign and arrange for the district convention, was composed of nine men. A majority of these men were anti-Kindred, but the chairman, who had most power, was a Kindred partisan, though pretending friendship for Nelson. On account of the drastic methods employed by the Brainerd candidate, the friends of Nelson, Gilman and Graves, made common cause against him, and when the time for the convention drew near, the campaign had resolved itself into a fight of Kindred against the field."

"Where to hold the convention was a matter of great importance. The Kindred partisans schemed to capture it for Brainerd where they could bring all sorts of pressure to bear upon the delegates, but in this they were shrewdly outwitted. The Nelson men on the committee favored Fergus Falls, a Nelson stronghold, but they feared that Colonel Johnston, who had two votes (his own and that of an absent member), would support Brainerd, so they proposed Detroit, the chairman's home town, which he was compelled to accept, as the Detroit people were keen for the conclave, knowing that it would be a memorable event, with hundreds, if not thousands of visitors on hand."

That, in part, concludes the installment of May 16, and more mention of the political battle as well as Brainerd will no doubt be found in the next installment.

Mr. Odland, the historian, has a clear, lucid style and tells his story entertainingly and in convincing fashion. He tries to be unbiased and aims, where possible, to present both sides of a question.

FINE WELCOME ACCORDED

BRAINERD people entered heartily into the spirit of welcome accorded the Winnipeg Friendship Tour party and they are to be commended. It was because of such a wealth of welcomes on the way to Brainerd, receptions and public addresses and so many lakes to view, that the party was late in arriving.

Mayor Ralph Webb is a popular executive and is doing fine work in bringing his city, Winnipeg, to the attention of the tourist and recreation world. As he so truly stated, their missionary work in putting on the Pines to Palms tour has started tourist immigration from the far south which must pass through Brainerd territory to get to Winnipeg. Our attractions will cause many to linger on the way and to see the beauties of this section either while on the way to Winnipeg or upon their return.

The work of Mayor Webb shows what a public spirited executive can do for his city. As so clearly stated by W. H. Evans of Minneapolis, of the Breezy Point Development company, the name of Col. Webb is known wherever tourists congregate, in fact the name of the mayor of Winnipeg is now more widely known than the name of New York's chief executive.

GOVERNOR CHRISTIANSON STRIKES
CONSTRUCTIVE NOTE AT FARIBAULT

Opening Address in Campaign for Republican Nomination Emphasizes Benefits of State Reorganization Plan, and Conservation of State's Resources.

Protection of the resources of Minnesota—of her natural resources through conservation and of her tax resources through economy in government—was the dominant note of the address delivered by Governor Theodore Christianson at Faribault Wednesday, May 12, in opening his campaign for the Republican nomination for Governor. He reviewed the progress made along these lines in the sixteen months he has been at the head of the State government.

"In submitting my candidacy for re-election," said Governor Christianson, "I make overtures to no political boss and promise obedience to no political group. I recognize no fealty but to the people of the state."

I believe that campaign promises are made to be kept. Two years ago I told the people that if they elected me Governor, I would use the power of the Governor's office to check the mounting cost of government. That promise has been kept. I now tell them that if they re-elect me, I will continue the job I have started. That promise, too, will be kept.

The kind of economy I stand for—the only kind of economy I believe in—is economy that needs no adjective or qualification.

I submit that there is need for that kind of economy, and more of it. The expenditures of government, curtailed at Washington, have continued to increase in most of the States. Governmental cost payments of the States increased from less than half a billion dollars in 1915 to more than a billion and a half in 1924; in other words, the cost of State Government in the United States more than trebled in nine years.

There have been corresponding increases in local expenditures. Counties, townships, cities, villages and school districts have piled expenditure upon expenditure, until the burden is threatening to crush American industry and enterprise. The total tax bill of America, which was $2,000,000,000 in 1913, was $7,500,000,000 in 1923. In ten years the burden almost quadrupled. In 1913 the taxes paid by the American people represented 6.4 per cent of their income; in 1923, 11.5 per cent.

And these figures, startling as they are, do not tell the whole story. For after taxing to the limit, the various units of government borrowed. In 1923, they issued bonds in an aggregate amount of $2,500,000,000, bringing the total of public expenditures to $10,000,000,000. And, in order that you may know that the upward trend has not ceased, let me inform you that in 1924, the expenditures of government in America were a billion dollars more than in 1923.

The Federal government has been reducing its expenditures, but the States and their subdivisions are, with a few notable exceptions, still competing with each other with the evident purpose of determining which can spend most without paralyzing the people's capacity to pay.

I said "a few notable exceptions." I am proud and glad to say that Minnesota is one of the exceptions. The upward trend was stopped in our State in 1925.

The total biennial appropriations for Minnesota in 1915 were $18,000,000; in 1917 they were $22,000,000; in 1919, $32,000,000; in 1921, $37,000,000; in 1923, more than $40,000,000. In 1925 the appropriations were held down to approximately the same total as in 1923, despite the fact that appropriations for State aid to schools were increased more than $100,000 over those of the previous biennium; those for eradication of tuberculosis in cattle nearly $350,000; and those for forest fire prevention and reforestation nearly $75,000.

Further, not satisfied with merely stopping the upward trend of State expenditures, the present administration has taken steps to effect reductions. It secured the enactment of a law permitting the appointment of any person already holding a State office to any additional State office without increase of compensation.

Reorganization of State Government. Another step taken by the present administration to effect a reduction of expenditures was the beginning of the reorganization of State departments through consolidation and merging of related activities. You will note that I said "beginning." I used the word advisedly, for the process has not been finished. It has only been begun. In fact, the task is too big, the readjustments to be effected too many, to be completed in one year, or even in two. The law attempts to merge most of the ninety-two boards, bureaus and departments of the State government into fourteen major departments. Actually, the law effected only paper consolidations. It is the task of the Governor and the heads of the various departments to translate each paper consolidation into an organic union. That work is progressing as rapidly as may be, but it has not been completed. It will not be fully accomplished for some time.

The Budget System. The third step in the tax reduction program was to set up some system through which the Governor might control the expenditures of State departments. The reorganization act gives the Governor effective control of State expenditures through the Department of Administration and Finance. The unique feature of this system of financial control is the pre-audit. The Finance Board may grant a requisition in full, it may allow some items and disallow others, and it may reduce any item. In other words, it may do anything with a requisition except raise it. It can use its powers to reduce expenditures; it has no power to raise them.

I assume that you are inwardly asking the question: "How much money will the new budget system save?" I wish I could answer that question, but I am going to tell you frankly that I can't. Nobody can answer it, until after the end of the first fiscal year of operation under it, on June 30th of this year. The total of savings should in a general way be the unexpended balances at the end of the present fiscal year plus the amounts paid out of this year's appropriations to cover last year's obligations.

The budget system should save more money during the second year than during the first; more during the third year than during the second. Reducing expenditures does not involve any spectacular achievements; it does not make first-page copy. It consists in finding the thousands of small items of extravagance and stopping them. It consists in making every dollar of tax money render one hundred cents of service.

Agriculture. Discussing the problem of disposal of the exportable surplus of farm crops, Governor Christianson declared: "The problem is one which must be solved by the Federal government, and I am convinced that now, when the attention of the whole country has been focused on it, it will be solved." Emphasizing that "it is a problem which experts, not politicians, will have to solve," he told how he had appointed authorities on marketing to represent him at conferences on this problem and also at Washington.

"One of the developments which promise improved conditions for the farmer is the co-operative marketing movement. Co-operative marketing is not a panacea for agricultural ills. It undoubtedly has limitations, but it also has possibilities for good which have not yet been fully explored. Co-operation should, and during my administration always will, receive the fullest measure of encouragement and protection."

Citing the "State Rural Credit System has helped the farmers of Minnesota by holding interest rates down," the Governor told of reorganization of the bureau effective July 1, 1925, to fit the requirements of the new law. Since the reorganization, and up to April 1, this year, there has been $3,249,000 loaned to the farmers of Minnesota, and there is not a dollar delinquent. "A rural credit system operated safely and efficiently will serve the farmers of Minnesota indefinitely. I presented the constitutional amendment which made it possible to establish a rural credit system in Minnesota. As Governor, I am standing for a policy on which will insure the continuation of the system on a basis that will serve the farmers and safeguard the State."

Labor. To give adequate support to labor in every legitimate effort to improve its condition is one of the obligations of government. That obligation our State has not shirked. In the measure of compensation provided by law for injured workmen, she stands near the top. Minnesota has also made substantial progress in the protection of women and children in industry.

Through the establishment of employment offices which closely cooperate with the Federal employment service, Minnesota is helping to solve the seasonal unemployment problem by bringing together the jobless man and the manless job. The labor requirements of agriculture are being met and involuntary idleness reduced to a minimum. Thus the interests of both farmer and laborer are served.

Waterways. It was my privilege, as chairman of the House appropriations committee, to have had a hand in the initiation of the waterways development movement in Minnesota. The appropriation made by our legislature in 1919 was not only the first appropriation made by any State to further the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence project; it was the beginning of the project. During the present year, further impetus has been given the movement by calling a Tidewater Congress, which served to emphasize the demand of the people of the Middle West for an outlet to the sea. Assistance has also been given an energetic and determined group of citizens, who have succeeded in definitely committing the Federal government to a policy of immediate development of large transportation on the Mississippi.

Highways. Minnesota's record in the building of roads has been one of achievement. Seven thousand miles of trunk highways are being improved and maintained without creating any obligations for posterity to discharge, and without appropriating a dollar from funds provided by the general taxpayer. During the present year, 170 miles of road will be paved, and inasmuch as there will be no outstanding, interest-bearing obligations representing the cost of paving, the entire saving in road maintenance resulting from the paving will be available for further improvements. It is a source of gratification that the administration of Minnesota's road fund has at all times been above suspicion. A great responsibility was placed in the hands of one man, and that responsibility has not been misplaced.

The last Legislature passed a law imposing a tax on gasoline, pursuant to the constitutional amendment ratified by the people at the last general election. The Legislature at the same session effected a substantial reduction in the tax on automobiles. The gasoline tax, which is yielding $4,542,000 per year, is being collected at an average cost of only $289.00 per month.

Law Enforcement. As Governor, I have not hesitated to use the power of the State to secure full and impartial enforcement of law and the investigation of crime. By executive order a commission was created charged with the duty of studying the problem of crime in Minnesota and reporting its findings to the Legislature with recommendations of such legislation as may be necessary and desirable to cope adequately with the situation.

Conservation of Resources. Through a consolidation of most departments and boards which had to do with the State's natural resources into a Department of Conservation, there has been effected a better co-ordination of the conservation activities of the State.

The reforestation of denuded forest areas is one of the greatest needs of the people of Minnesota. I would not minimize the importance and value of such measures as regulation of cutting, artificial planting and the setting aside of wooded areas into forest reserves; but I would particularly emphasize the imperative necessity of controlling forest fires and of placing the taxation of cut-over lands devoted in good faith to reforestation on such a basis as to compel the owners of such lands to take effective reforestation measures.

Closely related to the conservation of forests is that of our game and fish resources. Minnesota counts the tourist business as a great asset, but if tourists shall continue to come in ever increasing numbers, we must have something to offer them after they get here. Replacement and protection of wild life are, therefore, very important.

Another conservation problem of our State concerns itself with a wiser utilization of iron ore. Since 1884, when the first Minnesota ore left Two Harbors, we have furnished to the world more than 750,000,000 tons. It is estimated that there remains in the State a merchantable tonnage of 1,300,000,000 tons. It would thus appear that nearly forty per cent of Minnesota's high grade ore is gone. The annual shipments during the past ten years have aggregated 40,000,000 tons. These figures bring us to the unwelcome conclusion that unless additional ore bodies are discovered or new methods for more profitable beneficiation of low grade ores are devised, the iron industry in Minnesota is due to be short-lived. It is indicated that there is no less than 30,000,000,000 tons of low grade ore in the State. If this can all be beneficiated and marketed, we have reason to believe that our mining industry will continue indefinitely, making this one of the richest if not the richest, of American commonwealths. It is, therefore, imperative that the experiments that are being conducted be continued until the right method is found.

Minnesota is a State imperial in domain, almost limitless in resources. Her people number 2,500,000; and they are a blend of the best stocks of the human family. To serve such a State as Governor is a high honor. I owe much to the electorate of this Commonwealth for the opportunity of great service they have given me. I can partially discharge the obligation only by giving to my task the best that is in me.

I conceive of the State as one: no north, no south; no city; no county; its parts inseparable, its social groups interdependent, the interests of its people mutual.

Variety in Chic Spring Wardrobe

New Mode Expands to Meet Diversified Needs of Modern Woman.

Beginning with the silhouette and the chapeau and continuing to such an inconsiderable accessory as the purse, there is a lack of unanimity on practically every separate item of the new spring mode, asserts a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. You cannot dispute a lady who tells you that spring skirts must be long—at least to temperize with her and she will point to Poiret as her authority. Advise some one that the proper hat to wear for the new season will have a narrow brim, and in a moment you will hear the name of some authority who prefers the grande dame type. And so it goes. One designer makes his waistline high, one normal, another low. One makes his silhouette flare, another's is straight, a third is kinetic.

It is interesting enough to contemplate, but the time for decision is at hand. We shall not attempt in this article to suggest what silhouette or waistline to choose for your new spring acquisitions. Instead, we shall attempt to translate the mood of fashion as it should be applied to the various components of the wardrobe. The fundamental struggle, if there be any, is between mannishness and girlishness, and for the moment each has its place—and each, as well, is dropping in the other's province.

The popular Worth model is less masculine than the extreme atrocities that were affected a year ago, but clearly it belongs to the masculine genre. Under what circumstances is this costume smart? Clearly for the morning or afternoon stroll, the shopping expedition, the spectator's role at golf links or tennis courts or similar occasions. But keep it away from the dais, no matter what the temptation.

The Poiret evening gown is at the other end of the gamut. In it you have the contemporary absolute in femininity. The gentle natter blue chiffon, the ingenious silver embroidery, the bolero effect and the semi-bouffant silhouette are all represented. And the quaintly youthful longer skirt is the final touch of real girlishness. Not the merest hint of mannishness lurks about the costume—it would have been considered charmingly feminine even in those gentle prewar days.

We need go no further. What clearly appears is that for formal occasions midday is quite as deliciously feminine as her Victorian forbears, while for the rest of her infinite variety she becomes as informal, severe or sport-like, as the occasion demands.

There is no question of haphazard duality of tendencies. There is no deathless struggle between two hopelessly divergent types of dress. The modern woman is no creature of volatile moods who must always be one type or another. And the jeune fille will not develop into a concave mannish species merely because, when indulging in the recreations of her brother, she chooses to dress as sensibly.

It is simply that midday has added to her interests. Instead of being a cloistered bit of femininity all day, dressed in all the frills and furbelows of the late Victorian, she has become a sportswoman, a business woman and a clubwoman as well. And for each of these modern diversions naturally enough she requires a different type of dress. That is all that Patou means when he refers to duality of tendencies, and you need not let it worry you for an instant. The Paris collections must defer to every mood of the modern woman—they therefore include the various types of dress which are essential to each mood, and that is the why and wherefore of the dual mode, which is not really dual but has merely expanded to meet the increased demands of the modern woman.

Gowns for Every Occasion.

For spring Jeanne Lanvin has designed gowns that are suitable for every occasion and for every climate. The most elegant with a wide variety of pursuits will find within her doors simple little suits for golf or yachting, smart ensembles, exquisite gowns for calling or bridge, languorous tea gowns of richest embroidery and garden party frocks of simplest organdie that are a marvel of handwork, and perhaps better than anywhere else, lovely period gowns that are a delight to wear in the gracious setting of some rare old country house or historic castle.

This season's outstanding note, as far as everyday clothes are concerned, is the circular-cut skirt in the three or four piece ensemble. Jumper, skirt, short jacket and long or three-quarter length overcoat is the most popular interpretation. A light coat and skirt with a dark blouse or a blouse trimmed with dark material is a novel feature. There is a tendency also to introduce variety into the ensemble, making the coat or one item of the whole in a different color and material, yet giving a subtle sense of belonging to the same set.

Kasha, as usual, plays a large and important part in the Lanvin models. There is an apricot kasha coat worn over a navy blue skirt with a navy jumper spotted with white. A beige kasha coat embroidered with a large white motif, characteristically Lanvin, is worn over a black taffeta dress. A canary yellow alpaca coat with black and white-striped silk facings is worn over a white shantung dress. This season the Lanvin motif is placed on the right sleeve, on the large draped revers of a coat or dress or on the back of the coat. There are many other clever little individual touches, such as a tiny scarlet bow threaded through one revers of a navy coat frock with box plaits of navy and white polka dot and a scarlet leather belt. Another amusing finish is a narrow red cravette that appears under the collar of a beige suit at the back, forming a cross between the shoulders that is held in place with a red button in the center.

Lanvin uses buttons as a trifling, but she employs them with discretion. Wool embroidery is another form of decoration which she favors. Her new design for this season is a kind of overlapping shell-shaped scallop in shaded silks or wools which she uses on dresses and coats as well as jumpers.

Wide, flat bias tucks are another form of decoration which has appealed to Mme. Lanvin this season. She uses these most effectively in three shades of geranium red to adorn the cross-over corsage and edge the wide sleeves of a black alpaca gown.

Animals and other fantastic designs appear on the large patch pockets of sports overcoats. There is one in navy blue leather with a wild boar in silver on the pocket. It is worn over a delightful little jumper dress in light apricot jersey cloth. Another in heavy brown leather has panthers applied on the pockets.

Taffeta is used both for the gowns that are suitable for everyday town wear and also for the exquisite picture costumes which this time hovers between the periods of 1827 and 1840.

Though Lanvin uses every possible color under the sun, she shows a distinct preference for blue of every shade, from sky and turquoise through periwinkle and saxe to the navy, that seems likely to hold the forefront of the mode this year.

There is much beading on her evening gowns, and she often enhances them with shoulder capes. Some of them are two piece, and she is fond of a wide belt both for day and evening gowns that is laced at the side with a band of the material finished with tassels.

The evening ensemble is a factor of importance nowadays. Jeanne Lanvin equips it with a coat and gives it wide sleeves covered with intricate embroidery that gives the effect of dragonfly wings.

Hill-Billy Tunes Are Fad In Tin Pan Alley

A Captain and his crew, sailing on the ocean blue, when a call of distress came their way.

And Rose Wilder Lane, Famous Writer of Novels, Tells Why

New York City.—Hill-Billy tunes are the new fashion in popular songs this year. Along Tin Pan Alley the vogue is spreading.

Rose Wilder Lane, who has written a novel called "Hill-Billy," says the new fad has come about because of the present tendency of Americans to reconstruct the simpler manners and customs of their ancestors.

"We live in such a complicated world," says Mrs. Lane, "that a distinct movement is on hand among thinking people to restore simplicity."

"It is a worth-while effort. If some such idea had not sprung up, I don't know what would have become of our generations now in the making. It is conceivable that their minds might even have given out under the strain.

"As it is, architecture, furniture, cooking, and now even songs are going back to the primitive."

"While I was collecting the material for my book, I spent a great deal of time with the hill folks of the Ozarks. I found among them what I believe to be the real folk music of America—the Hill-Billy songs. These songs go back to the time before jazz, or even negro music, was heard on this continent."

"When I came out of the mountains, I found that the first Hill-Billy tune, 'The Prisoner's Song,' had reached Broadway. It was followed by a still more delightful mountain variation called 'The Song of the Sea.' I think there will be many others."

Royalty on Show

The elaborate pomp that always attended France's former royal families is shown in "Versailles: Its Life and History," by Cecilia Hill. Devised to impress their subjects, it extended even to their meals, and the royal appetites received a publicity that became offensive. In the Salon du Grand Convent, a long room, connected with the king's dining-room by a small door and narrow passage, "the queens of France," said Miss Hill, "ate their meals in incredible pomp, each dish, each drink being attended with almost as much ritual as the king's, and watched too by the public, anybody who was decently dressed being admitted to watch royalty eat. Energetic people did the round: watched the king as he ate his soup, were in time to see the queen eat, and hurried to the other side of the palace to gaze at princesses with dessert. Marie Antoinette, the bird in the gilded cage, found this custom so intolerable that she abolished it. But then, Marie Antoinette was a revolutionary."

Needs Human Skill

All the best china is still made on a potter's wheel and requires the skill of the human hand to give it the desired shape. After the potter places the lump of kneaded clay on his rapidly spinning wheel, he shapes it into a cup, saucer or plate with his fingers. Handles and other attachments are made separately and placed on the dish forms while the clay is still soft. From the potter's wheel the formed dishes go to the gas furnace for the first rough firing. They must have even heat and must not be placed so they will adhere to each other. The firing process lasts about three days. Three more days are required for the dishes to cool. This cooling off must take place slowly or the dishes crack.

"When a Man Bites a Dog-- That's News!"

Horace Greeley, the great American publisher, who advised young men to go west and grow up with the country, once refused a story for his newspaper about a dog biting a man.

"There is no news," he said, "in a dog biting a man, but when a man bites a dog, that's news."

The commonplace is not news; it is merely a reiteration of an old, established fact. But there is news—lively news—in a busy, thriving store like this, which is gripping to those who pride themselves upon being well posted at all times.

There is news that reflects the opportunities and the economies of the family purse; that informs each member of the things that are new, that are stylish, that are interesting, that should be possessed.

METAMORPHOSED BABE APPARENT TO ALL

MAY SOON EXCEL PACE HE SET IN 1921

RETURN OF RUTH IS COMPLETE AND UNEQUIVOCAL
ONE

THIS YEAR HE'S IN FINE CONDI-TION, ADOPTING REGULAR HOURS

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, May 17.—If any time within the next four games Babe Ruth gets another four base blow he will have forged ahead of the pace he set in 1921, when, it will be recalled, the Yankee's big boy made 59 homers before the season had run its course.

Five years ago the Babe got his 13th circuit clout in the Yankee's 33rd game. This year he has 12 in 28 games. Thus without recourse to higher mathematics, it is evident that he stands in a fair way to outdo his former mark.

The return of Babe Ruth is complete. Last year he was a pale and uninteresting invalid with a penchant for staying out long after the curfew had sounded its warning blasts. This year he is in fine condition and has adopted regular hours.

Artie McGovern's gymnasium, which was haunted by the Babe during the winter seems to have done its work. The hours that he spent on the wrestling mat and on the hand-ball courts are more than repaying him.

He has acquired not only 12 homers but is the leading run scorer in both leagues, the second leading hitter in the American league and the leader in runs attained.

Then he too he has never fielded better than during this season. Beside several startling catches he has cut runners at the plate with perfectly thrown balls from the outfield, and to the record his base stealing must be added and you find a new sport model Babe that is packing the Yankee Stadium as never before.

To turn attention to the commercial aspect of the Babe's sensational comeback, it is well known that his annual $52,000 salary, which came in a five year contract, expires after this season. Then will come negotiations between the Babe and Colonel Ruppert, the Yankee's treasurer, in which the Bambino's 1926 record is bound to figure largely.

The Babe has built a stadium and has caused the brewer to be a little less testy about prohibition than might have been expected. But baseball magnates are not noted for their generosity and it is certain the Babe's annual wage would have been cut drastically had he not improved this year.

NER'S HALL; BROWN IN SEMI-WINDUP

The world's middleweight wrestling championship will be decided tonight in Gardner's Hall when Tony Marcony, challenger of Brainerd, meets Waino Ketonen, of Duluth, undisputed world's middleweight champion.

Marcony has been training hard and is in excellent condition. He is confident that he will annex the belt from the champ. At any rate it will be an interesting session when Greek meets Finlander, with such a prize as the world's title at stake. Mr. Ketonen has many supporters among fans of his own nationality here who are backing him to retain the belt.

The headline bout is expected to draw a larger crowd than has yet turned out to any previous bouts.

In the semi-windup Dan Brown of Chicago will meet Harvey Rice of Crosby. Rice is well known on the range for his mat ability and Dan has wrestled several times here before on the same program with Marcony. These boys weigh 150 pounds and are fast and clever.

In the preliminary, Fred Gilmore, local artist, 180 pounds, will meet Sailor White, 190 pounds, of Grand Rapids, champion of the navy. Sande & Ande are the promoters of the card and from present indications a record crowd is expected.

Dr. A. A. Steinfeldt will referee all the matches.

Y. M. C. A. MEETS N. E. BRAINERD IN OPENER

MAYOR CAIN WILL PITCH FIRST BALL FOR START OF SEASON

BOTH TEAMS IN NEW UNIFORMS.
GAME PROMISES TO BE THRILLER

The lid of the Brainerd City Baseball League will be tilted tonight at 5:30 o'clock, when Mayor Vanni calls "play ball" and the first batter steps to the plate to face the first slant of Mayor Cain, who will pitch the first ball. The contestants will be the Y. M. C. A. team, last year's champions, and the Northeast Brainerd team, newest member of the city league.

Mayor Cain will take his place in the pitcher's box and officially inaugurate the third season of the league. The league was started in the summer of 1924, with five teams entered. The schedule was not completed that year, and no champion was named. Last year, with four teams entered, a faster brand of baseball was had, two half-seasons played, and a final three game series between the Elks, first half winners, and the Y. M. C. A., second half winners, resulted in a victory for the latter, two games to one.

The line-up for the Northeast team will include the best players out of a squad of about 25 players who have been trying out for the team. Either Elvig or Ebinger will be in the box. For the Y. M. C. A. the line-up will be about the same as last year, with several additions,

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Red Lucas, whose three base pinch hit in the 8th gave the Reds a 3 to 2 victory over the Giants and further entrenched Cincinnati in first place. Wallie Pipp's homer helped.

The Cubs defeated the Phillies 10 to 9 in a slugfest. Thirty hits were gathered by the two team off seven pitchers, including Hack Wilson's fourth homer of the season.

Four home runs by the Cardinals, one each for Blades, Rhem, L. Bell and O'Farrell, helped along a 13 to 2 rout of the Boston Braves.

Gehring hit a two bagger in the 11th and Detroit defeated Boston 6 to 5.

Although outlitt 12 to 10 the Brewers bunched hits in two innings and defeated the Blues 6 to 4.

After dropping the first game of a double header to the Indians, 9 to 5, the Colonels behind Dawson's effective pitching, won the second 5 to 1.

With Heinie Groh featuring at the bat, the Hens nosed out the Senators 4 to 3.

Four home runs, two by Waninger, featured St. Paul's 5 to 4 victory over Minneapolis.

DOUBLE VICTORY OF COL. BRADLEY

HIS WINNINGS IN KENTUCKY
DERBY TALK OF BLUE
GRASS COUNTRY

Louisville, Ky., May 17.—(UP)—With most of the eastern three-year olds on their way to their home stables today, the double victory of Colonel E. R. Bradley in Saturday's Kentucky derby is still the talk of the blue grass country.

Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage, which finished one, two, as the Bradley entry, brought their owner more than $56,000 in purse money, but turf enthusiasts are speculating as to how much more the Kentucky colonel won on wagers.

While the odds in the pari mutuels were less than 2 to 1 on the winner it is considered probable that Colonel Bradley placed heavy bets in the winter books and may have "cleaned up" as much as $250,000.

A story going the rounds since Saturday evening is that Mrs. Bradley, who died in Shanghai last January, accurately predicted the finish of the derby. She told her husband that Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage would sweep the field as the Bradley horses, Behave Yourself and Black Servant, did in 1921. Mrs.

Bradley named Bubbling Over and he was her pet, but she did not live to see his triumph. More than $2,000,000 was bet in the mutual machines Saturday and of this almost $700,000 went on the derby.

Whiskers Once Popular

A New York paper in 1885 stated that the military fashion of cutting the hair close was wrong, as the hair was a conductor of electricity to the brain and should never be less than two inches in length; the article commended the full-beard custom, and stated that shaving was a barbarism.

ENGAGED IN RACE AGAINST TIME

Mrs. E. T. Fleener and Assistants
Busy Checking up Recall
Petition

COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

Much Work Necessary to Determine Eligibility of the Various Signers

Mrs. E. T. Fleener, city clerk and her assistants employed for the purpose of checking the names of the recall petition of Mayor Cain are literally engaged in "a race against time," working at full speed with the hope of completing the check before the council meets tonight.

Since the city charter requires that no name appearing on the petitions be considered an eligible voter unless his name appeared on the former poll list and since there are names from the seven precincts appearing on the several petitions filed, a great deal of work is required to determine the eligibility of each signer.

The required number to make the petition legal is 830 eligible names and it is understood that approximately 700 names have been certified to as eligible at the time this article went to press.

In the event that the petitions have not been completely checked before the council meeting tonight, it is understood that a special meeting of the council will be required. No extra petitions have been filed since the original filing but it is rumored that petitions are today being circulated to secure larger number of signers so there will be no question as to the required number.

The petitions are in constant use by the checkers and are not on file for inspection till after the same has been presented to the council to whom they are addressed.

The Full Gospel Assembly will have prayer meeting in the church on Saturday evening, which will be preceded by a united open air service at the First National bank corner, at 7:30. Search River for Man's Body

Minneapolis—Police, told that a man had leaped into the Mississippi dragged the river while 1,000 persons watched, but found no body. One spectator, who teetered happily and sang snatches of a song, finally became the center of questioning and admitted he had been responsible for the alarm, but was not sure he had seen anybody jump into the river. He was released after a warning to stay sober.

GENEVIEVE YOUNG GETS CHAIR

Rockers

The genuine Spanish leather upholstered rocker given away by Fitzsimmons & Sons last Saturday evening went to Miss Genevieve Young, 213 N. 9th street. Miss Young guessed there were 1,337 tacks used in making the chair, which was the closest to the actual number, 1,336, as attested to by the manufacturers, Northwestern Upholstering Co., Minneapolis. Other close guesses were Dr. C. J. Reed, 1,331; Mrs. S. Brose, 1,325; R. C. Falconer, 1,325; John M. Bye, 1,347; Vernon Jamper, New York Mills, 1,348; Mrs. Andrew Bikkie, 1,350; and Dr. M. H. Carlson, 1,350.

The guesses ranged from 120 to 300,000. There were a total of 540 guesses registered. Fitzsimmons & Sons used their display windows and the columns of the Daily Dispatch, to announce the contest, which brought responses from nearly all towns within a radius of 40 miles of Brainerd. George A. Tracy and Albert O. Anderson acted as judges.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS

Final Meeting of City Organizations at High School Tuesday Evening

PROGRAM INTERESTING

Hon. Edward P. Scallon to Speak on
"The American Home"

The final meeting of the Parent-Teachers associations of this city will be held at the high school on Tuesday evening of this week. It promises to be one of unusual interest, for the program is varied. The one speech of the program will be a talk by Hon. Edward P. Scallon on the "American Home," part of which he gave at the Federation meeting at Ironton. This is a subject in which Mr. Scallon is especially interested, and he has given a great deal of thought to his speech. The reading of very brief reports from the different divisions will give the audience an opportunity to judge of the work done in the different parts of town and perhaps open their eyes to wider fields of service for next year.

In addition, the musical side will not be overlooked, for the high school orchestra under the direction of Miss Rickard will play several selections. Russell Putz will sing, and the Misses Bernice Samuelson and Violet Stanley will give one of their charming duets.

After the meeting there will be an opportunity for a social hour over the coffee cups, for a ten cent lunch will be served under the supervision of Miss Wanous, with refreshments made by the girls of the cooking department, and mothers will be able to inspect the work and surroundings of the girls.

It is to be hoped that a large number of fathers and mothers will find it possible to be present. The meeting is scheduled for 7:45 o'clock.

Zinnias in Assorted Sizes

"Youth and Old Age" is the ancient popular name of the Zinnia. Its significance is now lost. It originally came from Mexico in single form and, according to authorities, there were no double zinnias seen in America until after the Civil war. Now, however, it is doubled to the center and the single forms are rigorously thrown away when they appear among seedlings.

The zinnia comes in assorted sizes from tiny little buttons to huge globes of glowing color. The baby and adult forms justify the youth and old age name now even more than when it was applied to them. The latest development, which comes to us from California, is the dahlia-flowered form, the quilted petals relieving the huge blooms of some of their formality.

It is one of the most gorgeous and easily grown annuals of size. It is an excellent bedding plant whether the brilliant little buttons, not much over an inch across, or the huge blooms of six-inch diameter. There are intermediate sizes and forms which make excellent bedding plants the salmonrose variety now being very popular.

Not much is gained by sowing zinnia seed indoors and it is just as well to sow it outdoors as soon as danger of frost is over as it comes into bloom quickly and from seed sown the first week of May it will be in bloom in July, increasing in its wealth of bloom until cut down by frosts. It is a magnificent cut flower rivaling the dahlia. Some fifteen colors are now listed with various variegations and mottlings in addition.

The colossal and dahlia-flowered forms need 18 inches apart for full development. They will grow more than three feet tall. The dwarf grow two feet and need about the same space, while the hilltop types need a foot each way. The most effective use of these gorgeous annuals is in beds or borders of a single color or arranged in color gradations. The shades of yellow and orange are unmatched in any of the other annuals. The reds are singularly rich and velvety.

BRAINERD'S ODDER STORIES OF TODAY

Of all the fish stories prevalent in Brainerd today, the one told by the J. C. Penney company employees seems most plausible.

A. J. Sammons, Kenneth Bouma, Joe Day and George Orth were driven to the Orth cottage on Long Lake by Mr. Orth and Cal Orth who acted as chauffeur.

They began the day's activities by rowing out in a seemingly respectable boat but the entire group were soon deluged by an undue amount of water caused by a refractory leak in the bottom of the craft, necessitating a hasty trip back to shore. Nothing daunted, they next endeavored to "get a catch" by wading out in hip boots. Arriving at a suitable location they were immediately greeted by veritable hosts of unwelcome suckers. Results, another yet hastier exodus of the would be fishermen and now, they claim the photographer is putting the finishing touches to the pictures of the fish they caught.

NEW PARK VAUDEVILLE

Five Fine Acts of Vaudeville as Tuesday's Bill at Popular
Theatre

Tod Watson's Spanish Jazz Revue, introducing Marie Santoro and Granada Troubadours will appear in the feature act of the vaudeville tomorrow night at the New Park theatre. Judging from advance press copy on the show tomorrow night, the bill promises to be the best Brainerd has seen for a long time.

Tod Watson's feature act is a Spanish Jazz Revue, a unique combination of Spanish songs and dances rendered by a peppy group of boys from Madrid, Spain and the international dance favorites, Tod Watson and Marie Santoro. The act is purely Spanish type, but played in a typical jazz manner. The personnel includes: Tod Watson and orchestra; Castanet dance, Marie Santoro; orchestra; tango, Watson and Santoro; clarinet solo, Charles Torres; entire company.

Wade and Hale appear in "2 Foolish 4 Anything," a comedy act, guaranteed to produce a round of laughs and thrills. The two comedy artists are dressed in clown costumes.

The third act will see Mildred Millard in "Just Me." Mildred Millard is a comedienne who has won favor of the public all over the country by proving her ability as an entertainer in a series of exclusive songs given in an original manner.

The fourth act is a surprise for the audience. Charles and Mayme Butters appear in "The Tallest Lady in the Land." "Nuff sed."

The Mole Brothers offer a combination of fun and dexterity in their act entitled "A Cycle of Joy," a bicycle and unicycle riding act which provides plenty of thrills.

MUSICAL CLUB'S CHORUS ENTRY

Singers at Ironton Judged by Appearance as Well as Musicianship

MISS EFFIE DREXLER LEADER

Mrs. Louis Knudsen Accompanist, Present Pleasing Picture at Convention

The Brainerd Musical club ended its activities for the year by sending a chorus club entry to Ironton to the district meeting on Friday. Four towns, Swanville, Bemidji, Crosby and Brainerd entered the contest, which had for its rules the singing of two songs chosen for and one of their own choice. The singers were judged by their appearance as well as by their musicianship.

For some time past the 12 ladies in the club have been practicing under the leadership of Miss Effie Drexler, with Mrs. Louis Knudsen as accompanist. When they appeared on the platform they presented a very pleasing picture in their gowns in pastel shades. The large delegation of people from the home town were proudly proud of their appearance and singing, for they sang with ease and assurance that showed thorough mastery of their three songs. All of the points by which they were to be judged seemed to be met in a very high degree, so the disappointment of the audience was keen when the decision was read putting Brainerd at the bottom of the list, and a sad group of people wended their disconsolate way home. Through some error in mathematics, the contestants were not put in their proper order. This error was rectified at the luncheon the next day, to the satisfaction of the contestants and the audience.

The six ladies from Swanville sang very well and without accompaniment and received the overwhelming majority of popular votes as well as the position by the judges, and thoroughly deserve the first place.

The ladies of the club are to be congratulated on their success and on their leader, Miss Drexler.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO STOP DRAINING TEAPOT DOME RESERVE

St. Paul, May 17.—(UP)—The government's suit to prevent draining of the Teapot Dome naval reserve came before the United States court of appeals here today.

The suit is the outgrowth of the Teapot Dome scandal of two years ago when the reserve was leased to private interests including the Mammoth Oil company, Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company and the Sinclair Pipe Line company.

A restraining order to prevent the companies withdrawing oil was asked in the federal court at Cheyenne, Wyo. Judge T. Blake Kennedy denied the order and the appeal was taken.

In argument on the application the government will be represented by Atlee Pomerene of Cleveland, former United States senator, and Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia, special counsel.

John W. Lacey, former judge of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Martin W. Littleton of New York, will appear for the oil companies.

SOMEHOW or other, romance had passed Miss Weston by. She had a wealth of the material things of life, warm friends, good intellect, but—a real lover had never come her way.

Now, at nearly forty, she was realizing that this was the one side of her experience that was sadly deficient. She admitted that she longed for it. Some one had told her, either by word of mouth or through the printed page, that whatever you give to life just that will it give back to you. She had always given generously of what she had, materially, and it had always been returned to her. She had educated young friends. She found her own mentality growing marvelously as she dipped into the methods of teaching for those whom she was fostering. As she chose a program for some young friend she was to send through school, she derived personal benefits unnumbered in her research.

"But—" she began to analyze—"I seem to be so far removed from romance, from the tenderness of love that would make me a genuinely happy woman."

She wandered daily through her beautiful gardens. She bathed in the moonlit fragrance of her roses—alone. Here, she told herself, is loveliness in unbounded realms but no lover to enjoy it. She stopped suddenly.

"Why—" she said, half aloud—"it must be that I am selfish with my wonderful possessions—selfish in that my gates are closed to the stray lads and laddie who might like to wander in to have their romance made more beautiful by the radiance of this enchantment."

And, thereupon, she set about making plans that were not approved by her friends nor the people in her house nor by those who served her. But, she was determined and—her purpose was a secret one. She would surround herself by young lovers; she would give to those who wished beauty in which to whisper their words of tenderness, a setting worthy of such pledges and troths.

Through the lanes that wound in and out of her estate, she had stone seats hewn out of rocks, rustic benches placed close to clumps of Madonna lilies so that the perfume would enchant all who sat thereon. And—she opened the gates that led to the village.

Her faith in human nature was strong enough to keep her from the thought that she might become annoyed by the trespassing of young folks. She believed that they would recognize her purpose, her thought for their joy and comfort and their vision toward their future lives together. Friends said she was crazy, that she was making a silly spectacle of herself after so many perfect years of exemplary living.

But Miss Weston was undaunted. And Miss Weston's standing in the community was so exalted that she could not be openly questioned. If she chose to do this mad thing—why, it was her estate to do with as she wished. That was all.

If she encountered lovers strolling through the flowered pathways, she smiled and passed the time of day with them, looking into their happy eyes, seeing the glad mood of them. And from this she derived much pleasure.

One day a reporter for a newspaper, a man in middle life who did more than mere newsgathering for his paper, met Miss Weston as she stood on the tiny bridge.

"Miss Weston?" he asked. He carried a camera.

"Yes," she replied, graciously. She was lost in the beauty of the spot and her eyes were trailing a pair of young townsfolk who had just wandered up through the willow lane.

"I'm doing a series of local stories for our Sunday sheet and—do you mind if I take some pictures?" the man asked.

His smile was the most charming expression Miss Weston had ever seen on a man's face.

"No—indeed, I shall be only too glad," she said.

He was at a loss to thank her. He had not expected such kindness from the wealthy and intellectual owner of this magnificent estate.

"I'll go with you and help you to find the loveliest spots if you like," went on Lucy Weston.

Together they went across the bridge and up the willow trail the lovers had taken before them. From one exquisite setting to another they wandered until it became too dark for taking pictures.

"Perhaps," said the man, giving her his card, "you would like to see the pictures and article before it goes in."

"I'd love to," replied Miss Weston in a tone strangely warm and thrilling. This was only one of the many hours the two spent among the golden spots in the garden. There was not a wayside bench nor an arbored nook in all the fragrant byways of the Weston estate on which these two did not whisper things to each other that remain a part of their great romance today.

Two utterly lonely souls had found each other quite by chance but Lucy Weston always said it was because she had opened up her heart to the world of lovers that one without a mate came to sit beside her in her own garden of romance.

"Life gives you back what you put into it," she said.

SHARP ATTACK ON MOTOR STOCKS

New York, May 17.—(UP)—Early trading in the stock exchange was featured by a sharp attack on motor stocks, retail merchandising and rubber issues forcing many of them to new lows. During this period General Motors was about the only one of its group to show resistance. Later on the trading pressure was lifted and on a relatively small turnover a good many stocks recovered their earlier losses.

Trading was in fairly heavy volume but to a large extent professional in character. Oil issues showed the best tone helped along by favorable trade developments in the way of higher crude and refined oil prices.

Rails did little in the way of activity.
